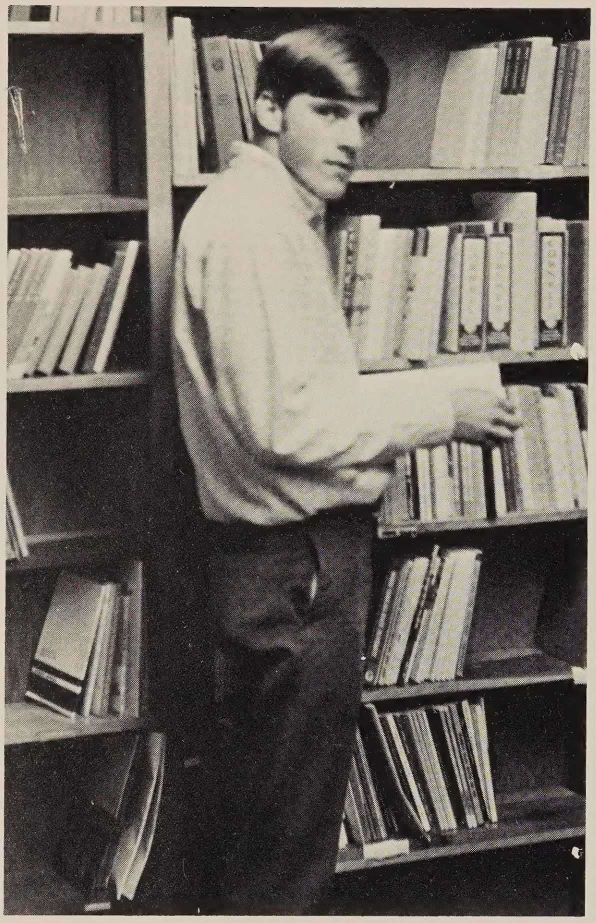
The Many Aspects Of School Life Combine



The 1967-1968 school year has brought a change at Madison. Students have worked closer together to create a more profitable and enjoyable school year. Classes, clubs, teams, and organizations have worked toward closer cooperation within themselves and with each other to achieve new and greater goals. The faculty has worked closer with the students to organize classes in which the student can learn and benefit from the many advantages offered at Madison. Outstanding students have been recognized and individual accomplishments were recorded; these are a single part of the complex of activities, ideas, and people that comprise a growing and active school.

The 1968 Montpelier has tried to capture the enjoyments, frustrations, laughter, and tears which students and teachers have felt this year; the staff has tried to recreate the atmosphere of unity at Madison within this yearbook.

Perhaps the most enjoyable aspects of school life are the outlets for self-expression offered by over 35 clubs and organizations at Madison High School. Apparent from the opening days of school were the increased student desires to attain self-expression by joining clubs and organizations in order to participate in school life, to make new friends, to broaden interests, and to accept more responsibility. New service clubs, allied with community groups, connected student and adult efforts to improve the community of Vienna. Madison's clubs and organizations ranged from the service clubs, such as the Madison Club, Madisonettes and Interact, to special interest clubs, such as the Chess Club, Future Homemakers, and Club Hippique. The existence of the clubs and organizations and youth's desire to help and take part in them actively testified to the UNITY seen within Madison this year.

SCA Co-ordinates Student Activities And Services

The Student Council Association is a paragon of leadership and capable management. Its program and services for the year included freshman orientation, student elections, leadership training, International Week, and welfare drives.

In conjunction with these responsibilities, the S.C.A. also supervised the Honor Commission, sponsored formal dances, promoted school activities, handled relations with the community, and published a monthly newsletter.

Extending her duties beyond monetary matters, Treasurer Carrie Briggs puts up the S.C.A. calendar on which she will record the daily student activities for the coming month.

Student Council Association Encourages Student

The new Honor Commission, voted on last year by the entire student body, was formed with the hope of eliminating dishonesty. The Commission operates by distributing envelopes containing cards to be put on the bulletin board in each classroom. According to the plan, when a student observes an action of dishonesty, he is to report only the incident by citing the time and place, being careful not to mention any names. Members of the Honor Commission regularly check the envelopes and deposit the written report of the incidents in any of the Honor Commission boxes located around school. The teacher is then contacted and informed of the incident. Since the attitude of the students is one of sincere concern, the goal of the Honor Commission neared realization as the school year progressed.

Foreign visitors from the State Department obtain a more complete picture of American school life as they visit the SCA office and hear Mike Wolfe explain student government at Madison.

Class Councils Organize And Unite Students

The Senior, Junior, Sophomore, and Freshman Councils play an important part in school life, as each council serves as the unifying group representing each class. Each council reports to the class members the proposed events of the school year. Representatives, who are choosen from social studies classes, help to organize their class members into class units. They try to inform each class member of what his class is doing, and they urge that all class members participate in and help with the planned activities.

Yearbook Records School Unity

The Yearbook Staff completed another successful edition of "Montpelier" this year. This interesting publication provides a special interest to the senior since it is basically a collection of entertaining photographs and copy documenting his final year at James Madison High School.

The Montpelier Staff attended the Yearbook Conference at Columbia University in the fall. Results of this conference included ideas concerning the effective rearrangement of sections and eye-catching poses.

A sincere concern by the yearbook staff members to portray the school as it appears to the student - - a body based on unity and co-operation - - was what produced the 1967-1968 Montpelier.

Hawk Talk Achieves Better News Coverage

This year, the newspaper staff published fourteen issues of their informative and entertaining "Hawk Talk." The lively four-paged publication depicted all the school news and events with which the student body was concerned.

Under its first male editor-in-chief, Lee Eiden, Hawk Talk is well on its way to the finals in the CSPA, an organization which recognizes outstanding high school journalism.

A highlight of the year was the entertaining and informative excursion to New York in March, to attend the annual newspaper conference at Columbia University.

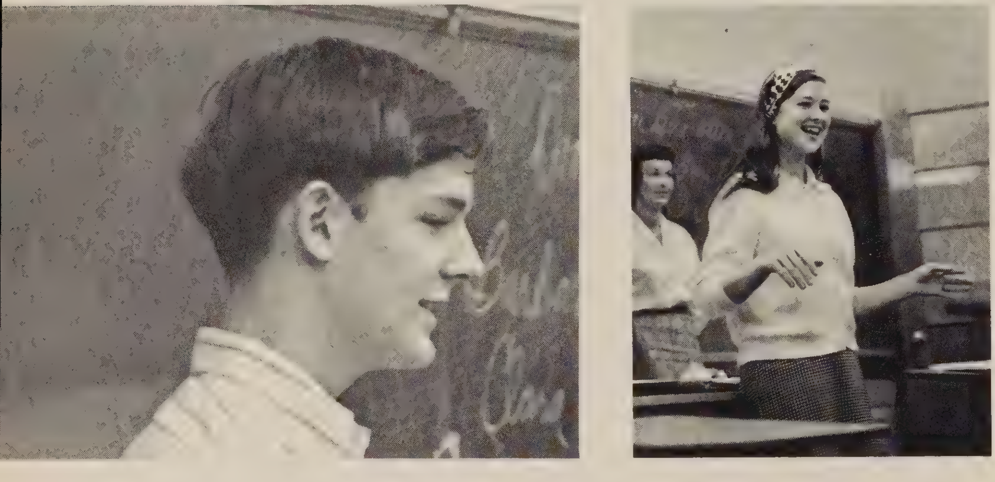
AFS Members Unite To Raise Funds And To Promote Interest

The American Field Service is Madison's most internationally-minded organization. It serves a dual purpose: to promote international understanding and to raise funds to continue bringing foreign students to Madison. Among the activities of the club this year were collecting for UNICEF, sponsoring the annual horseshow, and selling AFS discount cards. For the enjoyment of the members, several holiday parties were held.



AFS President Mark Blatchford and Vice-President Mary Lee Clemons plan their organization's agenda.

Inge Massemann was this year's AFS Student coming from Chile. She brought a Spanish flair to the school. She first became interested in AFS when an American girl from California spent a year with Inge and her family. Inge's favorite subjects are Math and Languages. She plays the guitar and participates in many of her native sports, especially skiing.

Foreign exchange student Inge Massemann takes part in an election as a Madisonette.

Positive Interpretations Of Madrigal Singers

The 1968 Madrigal Singers again presented positive interpretations of Choral works of the master composers Handel and Bach, and some contemporary composers such as Russell Woollen in their many singing engagements this year. Performances at the Washington International House, Truro Episcopal Church in Fairfax, and the annual Christmas concert earned strong reviews for the challenged singers. The Concert Choir presented its annual Christmas and spring concerts and offered assistance to the annual musical thus bringing the year to a happy conclusion.

The German Club had an active program. In addition to the traditional annual "Wanderlung", which is a hike taken by the members observing the favorite German pastime, the club members dined in several German restaurants. Culture of the German nation was also a topic of increased interest in the club this year.

Thespians Log Hundreds Of Production Hours

Thespian Society: Row 1: Wayne Slaughter, Rick Neilson, Vanne Owens, John Strange, Miss Frick. Row 2: Don Gates, Kenny Reid, Ralph Raney--President, Sandy Bell, Mary Abernathy, Pam Buckles, Milene Purdy.

The Thespian Society consists of students who have worked for at least one hundred hours on drama productions. In order to remain in this society, members are required to actively take part in one dramatic affair at Madison. Being an honor society, members accepted are recognized as the leaders of their school in the dramatic arts. At the close of the year, a "Thespian of the Year Award" is presented to the most hard-working, capable senior who has set the best example for the Thespian Society.

Mathematics Club Probes Exciting New Fields

The purpose of the Math Club this year was to increase the members' knowledge and to perfect his individual skills in mathematics. Any student interested in mathematics was eligible for membership in this club.

Math Club: Sitting: Linda Shulsinger, Laurel Tshergi, Mary Roarty. Standing: Ross Bott, Reid Stuntz, Pat Sullivan.

Science Clubs Encourages Individual Study

The purposes of the Science Club are to provide a supplement to the classroom science course, and to increase understanding and enjoyment of science. Through specific studies, students were encouraged to pursue scientific individual study. Field trips were organized to scientific places; guests were invited to develop ideas and discuss topics relating to the physical and natural world.

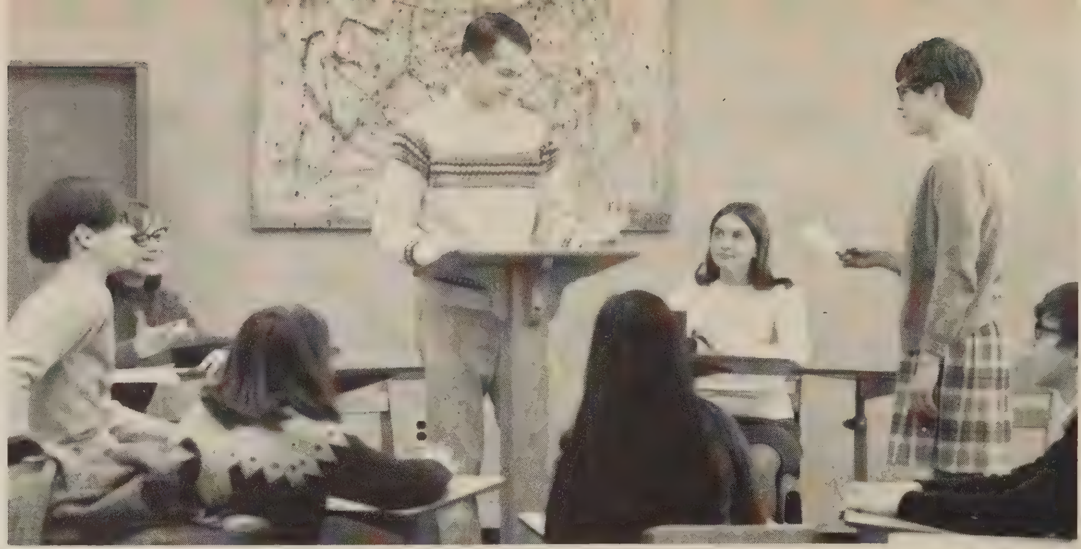
A definite debate technique is apparent as Sue Owen, the second negative debater, interrogates Mack Shelly, the first affirmative debater, in a practice debate while Jo Anne Kiesel, and Laurel Tschirgi, the other team members, and the rest of the club look on.



Debate Society Hosts Three District Matches

This year the Debate Society gave students interested in organized discussion the opportunity to gain experience through competition with other high schools in the Great Falls district. Although not all of the members actually participate in debate, everyone is involved, since some members debate while others do research in order to aid the Society for upcoming debates. The research involved in this program and the cooperation which must accompany it greatly benefits all students who participate.

"Resolved: That Congress should establish uniform regulations to control criminal investigation procedures." With this resolution the 1968 JMHS Debate Society opened its season. Debate promotes logical, argumentative discussion on a number of topics and allows students to develop consistent thoughts and ideas based on sound reasoning.

This year the debate team made a fine showing in the Great Falls District. The season began in mid February and lasted to late March. The district's debate season consisted of five meets; Madison was the host of three of these matches.

The purpose of the Interact Club, which is an outgrowth of the Rotary Club, is to promote community and international goodwill through club projects.

Interact sponsors two projects each year. One is a community project which benefits the town of Vienna. The other is an international project which includes such objectives as sending textbooks to underdeveloped countries and helping collect money and clothes for worthy causes such as the United Giver's Fund and the American Heart Association.

Fun Night And Banquet Highlight GAA Year

About noon on the coldest Saturday in early November the G.A.A. girls came to school to prepare hot chocolate, coffee, and hot dogs for the Warhawks home game. Serving refreshments at all home football games is a major fund-raising activity of the G.A.A.'s to help the Girls' Physical Education department buy needed uniforms and equipment. Girls interested in the athletic aspects of the school may become members upon invitation. Among the important things this active group of girls do are to arrange for the intramural program and to sponsor bake sales for the department. "Fun night" is held each year with the association's inviting other associations from other schools in for a night of games and goodies and to promote a spirit of friendliness and sportsmanship among schools. Climaxing an active year of purpose and enthusiasm, the G.A.A. held its annual Mother-Daughter banquet in the spring.

Lettermen Stress Unity And Promote Spirit

The Monogram Club is designed for the Varsity letterman of any sport at James Madison. The Club's main purpose is to express the athlete's interest in serving the school and community. A chief goal of the organization is to promote school spirit and unity since interest in sports is not just up to the players but to their fellow students as well. Among the projects of the club included the awarding of the "Outstanding Athlete Award" and the service of providing scorekeepers at all home games.

Club Hippique Sponsors Annual Horse Show

Club Hippique was organized to enable interested students to participate in activities concerning equitation. The annual project of the organization is to sponsor a horse show. Other activities of the Club are trail rides and visits to local horse farms. Requirements for membership are simply an interest in horses.

Nike And FTA Members Prepare For Careers

Interested in a career in fashion designing, airline work, teaching? Then join the Nike Club. The Nike Club's main objectives are to study vocations and prepare for careers. Other goals are developing initiative and building leadership. Meetings include discussing club projects and club business. Guest speakers, who give information about their specific fields, are invited to attend. Their talks include the giving of specific information about the vast job possibilities open to young women.

The Future Teachers of America had a productive and interesting project this year. It involved student teaching at two local elementary schools. By pursuing this type of program, the members explored interests and ability in the teaching profession by actively helping instruct young children. Each month the F.T.A. recognized one of Madison's teachers for his outstanding work in and out of the classroom by electing him "Teacher of the Month."

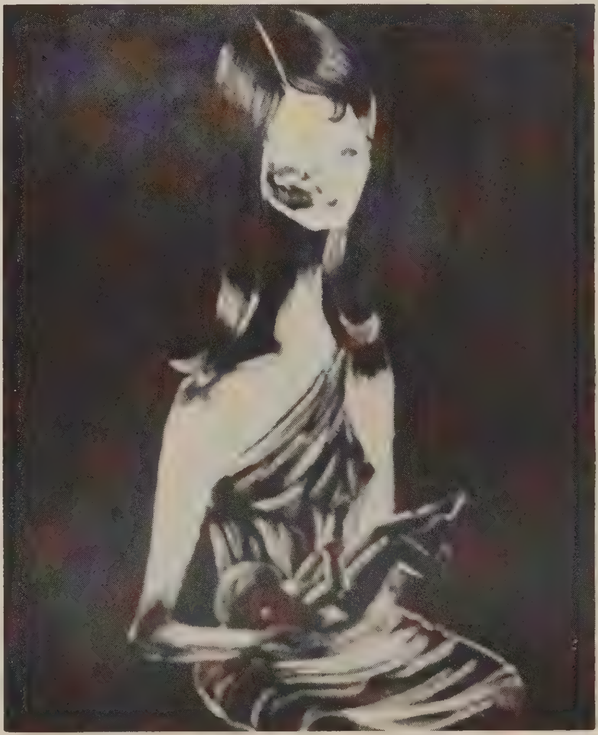
Art Club Sponsors Successful Exhibit

The Art Club was quite active this year. Shortly after its organization, the group was commissioned to paint twenty shirts for a sales meeting. The results were some very beautiful designs, even a few psychedelic phenomena. The December Art show sponsored by the club was very successful. Other plans of the organization included visits to museums and a number of sketching trips.



"The Madonna", a scratchboard by Mary Okon, won second place in Madison's Art Show.

Chess And Bridge Clubs Play To Improve Game

Shh!! A room of almost total silence is the first order of business for the fast-paced Chess Club. The purpose of this club is to improve the members playing ability and to provide an opportunity to play. A team of the five best players from the club competed with other teams from various schools in the Northern Virginia Scholastic Chess League.

Helping all interested students learn both the fundamental and more complex methods of bidding, scoring, and the actual play of the hand is the objective of the Bridge Club. This objective is accomplished through manual instruction, guest speakers, and the supervised slow play of the hand.

In the spring the Geography Fair of Virginia was held at Chesapeake. Included among the exhibits is the project of James Madison's newly formed Geography Club. The club undertook the ambitious project of surveying aspects of the Capital beltway. Meeting weekly in the geography center, Mr. Gering's room, many future geographers, cartographers, geologists, and interested observers discussed topics of interest in the fields of geography and related subjects.

Interest Keen In Camera And Geography Clubs

While providing excellent background for practice in photography, the Camera Club offers its members the opportunity to better their photographic skills through the use of professional equipment. This club assists the school through its cooperation with the school's publication staffs in arranging for pictures to be taken of games, activities, dances, and other exciting school events. Membership is open to all interested shutter-bugs at Madison.

VOT, DE, And FBLA Programs Enable Students

In every society are merchants, accountants, and business leaders. Skills important to this aspect of school are learned through the practical experiences taught through Distributive Education and Vocational Office Training, the two work study programs offered at Madison. The Future Business Leaders of America offers the student training for work in the field of office management.

Vital on-the-job experience is taught from the viewpoint of employee-employer relationships. Among the activities of these clubs are visits to local businesses to see the economy in action and an employer-employee banquet where all the students entertain their "bosses" at lunch. State conferences are attended by interested students in the spring, and for a culminating activity the "D.E. Student of the Year" is selected to round up a year of progress.

Want any tables moved? How about the ticket takers at basketball games? Who sells all the cokes at concerts and plays? Ask any Madison student and he will tell you its the Madison Club. The primary importance and function of this club is to serve the school. This year the club, which is the oldest service club at Madison, took on the additional activity of trying to promote school spirit. The valuable service of the Madison Club in their numerous activities is greatly appreciated by the entire school.

NHS Members Represent Scholastic Excellence

The National Honor Society seeks to identify and recognize scholastic excellence within the school. Based on the idea that students should develop four-fold, membership in this society is based on high ideals of scholarship, leadership, character, and service as stipulated in the constitution of the organization. Thirty-four students,whose cumulative grade point average was 3.2 or higher, were inducted into the society in December while plans were underway to hold another induction in the spring.

To develop leadership within the school, the National Honor Society undertook as one of its projects mutual cooperation with the S.C.A. in sponsoring a leadership training program. Other activities of the organization included the compiling of a fact sheet for all freshmen for their orientation program in September. Programs with interesting speakers were held and a constitutional revision committee was appointed to recommend changes in the constitution. Rounding out an active year, the James Madison Chapter sponsored a slate of officers for the Northern Virginia Conference of Honor Societies, who purpose was to promote the ideals of the societies on an inter-school basis.

Sports brings a student body together in a unique way that nothing else in the schoo In achieving a sense of unity each player and each spectator are creating a feeling of onenes school. At Madison spirit and unity have been displayed greatly this year as its teams have shown true sportsmanship and have given the students a feeling of pride in their accomplishments. Each person who yells in the crowd, each cheerleader who leads that yell, and each player who is on the team gives a part of himself to this successful endeavor. Madison's teams exemplified the true spirit of unity that is only achieved when individuals cooperate to create a true esprit de corps. Students never feel as closely united as when they yell in one voice "Take that ball and go!" or "Freshmen yell it . . . sophomores yell it . . . juniors yell it . . . seniors yell it." Many emotions are felt and magnified by sports. Who hasn't felt frustration at a foul shot missed, joy in getting those two essential points to win, or the spirit of accomplishment in running those hard 50 yards with the ball to make those important 6 points? A school is as strong as those individuals who comprise it, and Madison High School's spirit has to take second place to no one's in its commitment to excellence and in its support of the coaches and participants in the athletic program.

The culmination of excellent coaching and playing ability provided Madison with a truly outstanding team this year. Despite our 4-6 record the team spoke well for itself in all the games. Coach Leskovar provided the needed coaching skills and helped lead the team through a somewhat heart breaking season, sprinkled with close games and unlucky breaks. Fortunately many of our lettermen will be returning next year and Coach Leskovar says, "Watch out!"

The JV Warhawks finished the season with 1 win, 5 losses and 2 ties. Fortunately, this record was no indication of the team's spirit and desire, as this was one of the most unified teams in Madison's history. Its unification of spirit, purpose and design was jelled by Coaches Johnson and Pappas. These boys will certainly be a credit to next year's varsity.

Frosh Sights Set High For Next Year

Despite its losing season, the frosh team exhibited some great, untapped potential and a lot of hustle and spirit. Basic and higher refined coaching techniques were provided by Coaches Fleming and Hannah. Next year promises to be a good one for the JV with this upcoming wealth of talent. Keep your eye on next year's JV!

Suzanne Brummitt models the "in" look for the Hockey Season.

The 1967 Varsity Hockey Season opened with a 1-0 loss to Langley. This was followed by 2 wins, 1 tie, and 4 losses for an overall record of 2-5-1. Carolyn Carlson and Jo Anne Simmons received the Most Valuable Player Award for their outstanding spirit and ability. Debbie Gregg was recognized as the most improved player.

Although experience was lacking on the Junior Varsity, the team had a successful season with 4 wins and 4 ties. The best game was against Mt. Vernon, as the girls held their opponents scoreless while gaining 3 goals for Madison.

The boys showed great spirit and stamina throughout the entire season by always placing among the first runners of every match. Certainly credit and a pat on the back goes to Mr. Weaver, the coach, for his fine work with the team. This combination of coach and outstanding runners proved to be one of the "better" teams at Madison.

Madison's "Finest Hour" Says Coach Hannah

With the outstanding efforts and desires of both coach and team, Madison produced the most brilliant basketball team of its entire history. Faultless, spectacular plays and manuevers Roned to fine edge by Coach Hannah won Madison the third place position in the Great Falls district. Great playing ability and desire was certainly shown by the entire team, but perhaps was most exemplified by returning lettermen Roger Hatcher and Jimmy Dickson. Their hustle and spirit seemed to complete the already perfect machine constructed by Hannah and his assistants. Surely this was one of the greatest basketball seasons ever witnessed by Madison. Congratulations to Coach Hannah and team on a job fantastically done!

The Baby Warhawks fought their way through a tough and discouraging season for their first year in high school basketball. Despite their somewhat poor showing these boys comprised one of the most spirited and hustling teams ever to hit the courts. This spirit and hustle seemed to make up for their somewhat undeveloped playing abilities. Coach Dancu is confident that by next year their playing abilities will be greatly matured and the combination of these abilities and spirit will produce a red hot team for next year's JV.

Girls Varsity Basketball Has Successful

The 1967-1968 Girls Varsity Basketball Season was extremely successful. They recorded 12 wins and no losses. Coached by Miss Dean the Team was organized and plays developed which were used successfully game after game. The outstanding forwards were Jo Dost, scoring 231 points, and Jan Owens, scoring 222 points.

Despite tremendous competion this year, the Varsity wrestlers were able to secure a third place position in the No. Va. district, send seven wrestlers to the regionals, and three to the state finals. Coach Verciglio used his same great coaching techniques this year to turn out his successful wrestlers. Returning lettermen Whalen and Kennedy remained undefeated all season and wrestled in the State finals. Certainly these boys should be commended for their outstanding efforts. Ballhawks Display Confidence And Determination

Filled with unequaled spirit, ability, and desire, the Varsity Baseball Team was bound for a successful season this spring. Coached by Tom Christie, the Varsity opened its season on the home diamond March 26 against Marshall. Because approximately two-thirds of the team members were returning lettermen, the team felt they had a head start on competing schools and played a good season.

Although somewhat lacking in new talent this year, the Junior Varsity Baseball Team played well under their new coach, Charles Dye. Coach Dye felt all season that his men had trained hard and met their opponents with tremendous individual determination, as well as great team effort.

Track Team Members Excel In All Events

Tim Gadell put in many hours of practice running the high hurdles this spring.

The golf and tennis teams trained thoroughly for the 1968 season. Both teams felt confident of their ability to play, and supported this feeling with their past experience and regular practice.

The tennis team started practice with snow still on the ground in early March.

Softball Teams Work Hard But Enjoy Season

Tryouts for the 1967-68 Girls' Softball teams were held March 4-22. Due to the lack of good weather practices the first few weeks were held in the gym. Mrs. Milbourn, the Varsity Coach, was very confident in the team all season due to the fact that they were fairly experienced. The JV team, with a relatively new group of girls participating, were trained and prepared for the season by the tireless efforts of Miss Dean. The scheduled games for the season included the following schools: Langley, Herndon, Marshall, Oakton, McLean, Falls Church, Fairfax, Woodson, Lee, and West Springfield.

Mrs. Milbourn, Varsity Coach, explains a play to senior Cheryl Nimmo as the team members practice indoors due to inclement weather.

"My flowers are prettier than yours," says Suzanne Sheats, as Pat and Peggy look also at theirs.

In a football pep assembly skit Mr. Belches pleads for a cup of water from Pat Michaelson so that he may put out a fire in his office. The slogan of the week was "Preserve Water" in order to drown the Woodson Cavaliers.

Enthusiastic Cheerleaders

The 1967-1968 Cheerleading Squads proved to be the most spirited in Madison's history. Present at most athletic events of the year, they succeeded in boosting the Warhawks' spirit to heights never before reached. Whether cheering through the halls, selling lollipops, participating in spirit-raising events or decorating lockers, they were exuberant. Their enthusiasm, whether win or lose will long be remembered.

JV cheerleaders soar cheering, "Up Up and Away!"

In every high school year certain special events are featured. Madison's wonderful year, 1967-68, may be classified as a year of FEATURES. This year saw a certain Friendliness among the student body. As new students entered, they were greeted by student assistants and welcomed to their new school. Enthusiasm was shown in the planning of all the special events of the year. Who couldn't help but be enthusiastic at the Homecoming festivities so well planned by the S. C. A.? Active, yes! James Madison High School is a flurry of activity. With dances, plays, musicals, interclass competition, and the hundreds of other ideas emanating, there is always activity going on. How could such things be possible without Teamwork? In the course of the school year many students are responsible for originating and implementing new ideas. New cheers are originated; new schemes for dances are originated; new ideas such as VooDoo dolls are originated. With this comes close cooperation all directed toward the single goal of providing interests for all. How Unusual were some ideas this year! An unusual, yet well-performed, musical was given. Remember the unusual Sadie Hawkins Day Dance given in the snow? Not many running L'il Abners got away from their Daisy Maes this year. Remember the decorated doors at Christmas and Mr. and Mrs. Mistletoe? Yes, Madison students are Responsive and are encouraged by the Faculty for their Excellence in many endeavors, and they possess that special Spark for getting and carrying through original and entertaining ideas. The Features section presents views of the exciting events of the past year planned and carried out by the students. Only with the ideas and vim presented by interested students can such activities be possible.

Freshmen Orientation, held before school began, enabled new students to meet teachers and tour the school. A program was presented to introduce Freshmen to the new principal and his administration. Students who held positions of leadership were also introduced. Exhibits displayed by various clubs depicted aspects of extra-curricular activities. A student handbook containing rules, history, leaders, and the Constitution was distributed.

Spirit Week was held early in the football season to usher in all fall sports. Cheerleaders waited on the players during lunch, endeavoring to lighten their worries so they could concentrate on the opposition. Madisonettes sold Voo-Doo dolls to students on game days to hex the other teams. A pep assembly, the first of many, allowed students to meet the entire team and its coaches.

Homecoming followed the traditions set in past years. A queen and court were chosen and crowned at the game. Classes and Clubs created imaginative floats that were judged and awarded prizes. Seniors were justifiably proud as their float took first place honors.

"Color-It-Autumn" was the theme of Madison's first major dance. Using the warm tones of orange, yellow, and brown, decorators were able to capture the mood of autumn. Programs carried through the theme by the use of a maple leaf design. The cafeteria was kept softly lighted with the sole spotlight upon the Queen's carefully constructed throne.

Musical "On A Clear Day"

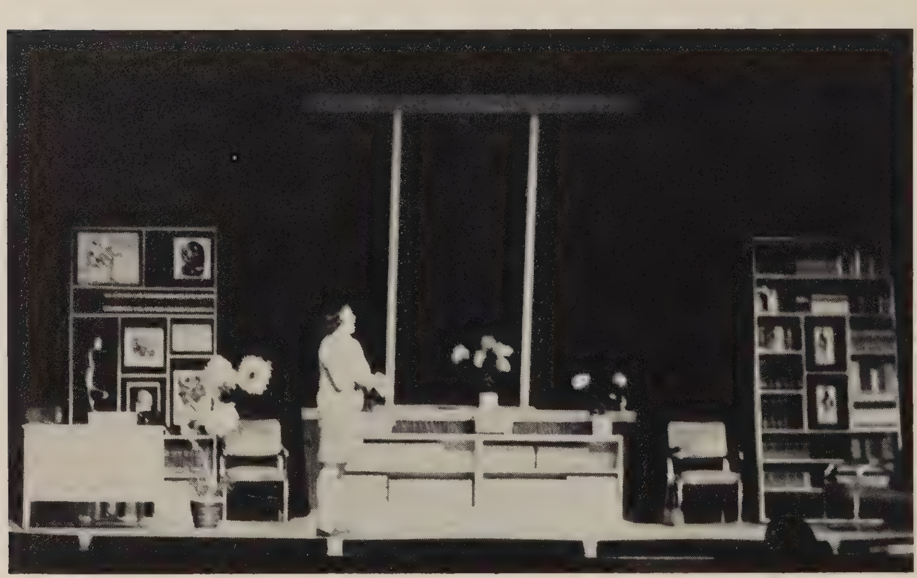
Madison's major dramatic production was the musical "On A Clear Day You Can See Forever". A recent addition to the musical works of Alan Jay Lerner, the play deals with the world of re-incarnation and the supernatural. Musical scores, comic roles and dance routines presented the cast members with a real challenge. Tim Mervine and Joanne Bailey played the leading parts of the psychiatrist, Mark Bruckner and a young New Yorker who may have lived two hundred years ago, Daisy Gamble.



Joanne Baily sings to an opening night audience.

Innovations, the keyword for events at Madison this year, epitomized Christmas activities. In an attempt to boost spirit and create a warm cohesive atmosphere, Spirit Committee Chairmen Nancy Donnelly and Jan Tudor initiated a special Christmas Week. Each homeroom decorated its door which was judged on originality and technique in a contest. The Cans-for-Christmas drive conveyed the intense efforts of the classes to aid their community as a record number of cans were collected. The week was culminated by two assemblies. The first featured Mr. and Mrs. Mistletoe, their helpers and Santa leading students in Christmas Carols. Madison's choral department afforded students the opportunity to listen to a beautiful program. A Christmas sock-hop was held following the basketball game.

Presented To Enlist New Members

The American Field Service Club annually presents an assembly to interest new students in becoming members of the club. Visitors from other schools who have lived and worked in other areas of the world under the Americans Abroad Program related their experiences and family relationships. Each urged all students to carefully weigh the advantages of travel and study abroad.

Leadership Training was a joint effort between the SCA and the National Honor Society. The program was offered to all interested students in the hope of discovering and developing their leadership qualities.

Well-Deserved Recognition

Madison's Virginia Boys' and Girls' State delegates were Mack Shelly, Graham Strong, Mark Youngblood, Karen Schiavetti, Pat Michaelson, and Nancy Donnelly.

Madison's talented Senior Class received many accolades rewarding them for their contributions and hard work throughout their four years of high school. National Merit Semi-Finalists were chosen and then competed for both scholastic honors and financial aid. The annual Optimist's Youth Award as well as the DAR Citizenship award were given to students who had through their endeavors, strengthened and unified their school. The It's Academic Team, selected by audition, competed successfully in its first two attempts and gained valuable scholarships for Madison. Students elected to attend the American Legion Boys' and Girls' State Conventions, which were held during the summer at Virginia colleges instructed the delegates in government and helped develop leadership potential.

Seniors Plan For Long-Awaited Graduation

Carol Panasewich and Jeanne McCormick discuss graduation announcements and calling cards.

June brought the anxiously anticipated graduation for members of the Senior Class. Four years of work and enjoyment, frustration and happiness culminated on June 4, 1968. Caps and gowns arrived and four hundred forty Seniors met at Constitution Hall.

Underclassmen busily prepared for the next year. New class officers and SCA officials were chosen by the student body. Other positions of leadership such as publications editors and cheerleaders were selected from the ranks of the rising Senior Class. Clubs elected their officers and students made their course choices for the coming year. An awards assembly highlighted spring activities as both Seniors and underclassmen received recognition for their contributions to the school. Faculty awards, language medals, and acknowledgement of administration aids took place.

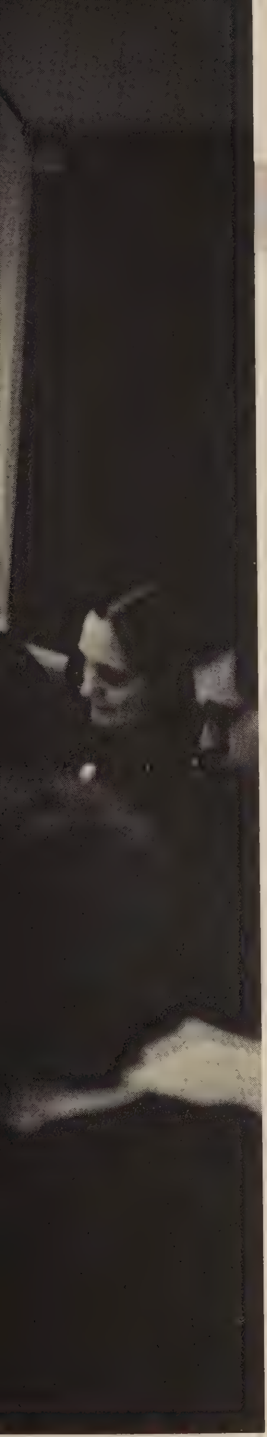
A



The intellectual pulse of any school is the dedicated faculty whose profession it is to instruct those under their charge. The educational process requires well-trained and skilled personnel who are able to guide and provide the positive incentive for the students. Teachers at Madison High School contribute many hours to help students academically, yet they also find the time to lend their experience and support to the many school-sponsored extracurricular activities. The many hours helping students academically are spent planning courses of study, implementing lesson plans, conducting research, delivering lectures, guiding classroom discussion, providing necessary drill on fundamentals, demonstrating techniques, and perhaps most important of all . . . helping the students to express themselves and to think for themselves. Serving as club and organization sponsors, coaches, and in general, lending a helping hand, the faculty provides the guidance for the many events that promote unity and spirit within the school. This leadership and aid helps students accept responsibility, and also helps prepare the students for future responsibilities. Coming from colleges and universities all over the United States and some foreign countries, the Madison faculty can count a diversity of experience and viewpoints. Various ideas on a single subject may expose the students to many interpretations, so that, in the final analysis, it is the students who must choose and select the best of what is offered according to their own critical thinking. The school may justly be proud of its instructional staff!

Madison Changes

James Madison received a new leader! Shelton Belsches was appointed principal to replace Mr. Bonner, who was advanced to county administration. Mr. Belsches immediately began a program whereby all school policy was examined with certain innovations being made. Thus, as the Prom was changed to be held in the gym, the tradition of graduation at Constitution Hall was upheld.

During the entire session, Mr. Belsches examined situations closely and objectively before making new decisions.

As the year progressed change was noted, but in the final analysis many of Madison's traditions were carried on under the new leadership.

Administration Seeks To Make Cooperation Possible

With the new administration, change became inevitable. From the beginning of school in September, it was obvious that Madison's administration was striving to have as smooth a school year as possible. Students entering were surprised to find that their studies would proceed immediately without delay. Even the STEP and SCAT tests were administered in such a way that a minimum of class time was lost. Not resting on this auspicious beginning, the administrators worked steadily all year to provide the needs and desires of the faculty and student body.

Office And Guidance Secretaries Help School Unity

Coping with the tremendous amount of paper work connected with Madison's activities was the task of the secretarial staff. Throughout the year it became their job to find lost IBM cards, straighten out confused students, answer the many telephone calls, and provide solutions for any problem or crises that arose. This was truly a continuous battle, but for the most part, the secretaries managed to come through admirably. They even have a spare moment to get their pictures taken.

With increased aid from the IBM system, Madison's Guidance Department was able to move smoothly through the trying experience of opening school and changing schedules. Giving aid and advice to those seniors who are looking ahead for possible post-high school education is an important function of this department. Besides giving the helpful and appreciated personal words of wisdom, counselors provided an extensive selection of information concerning many schools.

With these duties the members of the department did a great deal of work throughout the year administering the College Boards, PSAT, National Merit Scholarship Exam, and other important tests and surveys. They also offered themselves in a sympathetic role and listened to the many problems students might have concerning their classes and lives.

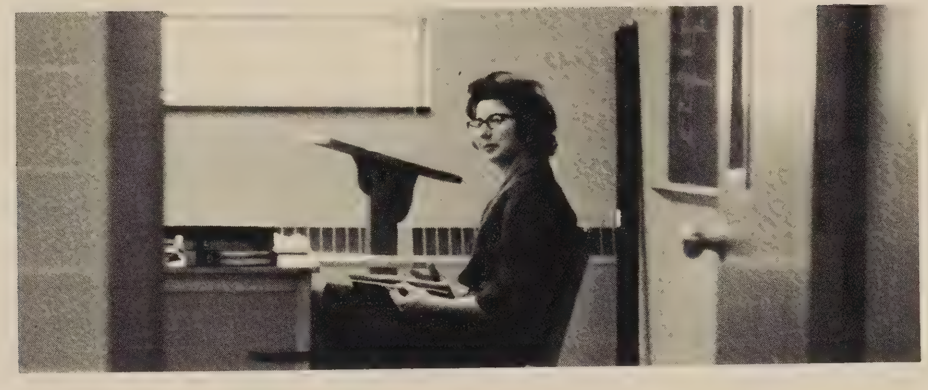
English Teachers Encourage Critical Reading

And Stress Individual Research In Literature



Mrs. White

The only course taught to every student at Madison, English has been carried to a position of high esteem by its faculty. Perhaps the greatest asset toward the betterment of the English Department has been a lower student-teacher ratio which has allowed the teacher to form a closer educational relationship with each student. Each English teacher seemed anxious to confront his job of drilling the students on grammatical fundamentals and creating an interesting literary world for the student to delve in.

The department's emphasis on the continuation of Advanced Placement English, a course designed to allow more gifted seniors to work extensively with various works of English authors and to promote more independent research, has been retained. The student body, as a whole, was aided by a film series showing selected films based on the literary, artistic, and cinematic arts.

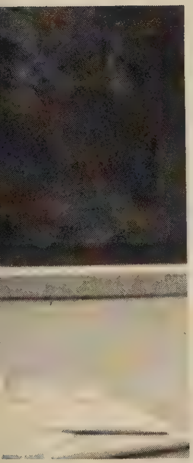
Social Studies Seeks To Link Present To Past

Geography and World History: Mr. Gering, Mrs. Garland, Mr. Anglin, Mr. Nickle.



As the events of today rapidly progressed to their place in history, the Social Studies Department sought to correlate them with established happenings of yesteryear. Thus a history or government course was not a mere test of the facts, but an effort by the teacher to make the student understand why certain facts were important.

Teachers stressed the association of historical events with the present world situation. They emphasized the importance of the democratic process by supporting the continuation of the Junior and Senior Councils which, through elected representatives, conducted class business and reported to the classes at large.

The Teaching Of The Sciences

Among the more than 1600 students at Madison this year, it would seem very probable that there were a number of budding science scholars. The job of the science teachers, therefore, was to uncover this potential and stimulate it. The easiest way to do this is to make the courses interesting enough that the student really wants to learn.

With a great deal of laboratory space and more instructional materials, the members of the Science Department were able to allow their students to learn and discover through experimentation. Since the variety of courses was diverse, including Earth Science, Biology, Chemistry, and Physics, the prospective scientist was encouraged to explore in order to find the field in which he was most adept.

Boys' Physical Education: Mr. Weaver, Mr. Leskovar, Mr. Chaudet, Mr. Christie

Total Student Body Fitness Is Sought

Girls' Physical Education: Mrs. Milbourn, Miss Lee, Miss Dean, Mrs. Birch.

With the new gymnasium available for the first whole school year, Physical Education teachers were provided with a great deal of added space in which to operate. With this advantage and a firm belief that a student's body, as well as his mind, should be conditioned for the future, they attacked the mammoth task of educating unsure muscles of freshman and sophomores. Vigorous daily physical activity was encouraged, and by mid-year, it was obvious that these teachers were making noticeable gains towards the coordination of boys' and girls' muscles into the maturity of men's and women's.

Along with this omnipresent job of conditioning students, the gym teachers also undertook the bulk of coaching responsibilities in the areas of both interscholastic and intramural sports with remarkable and commendable results.

Arts Thrive On Student Support

The media for personal expression, Art and Music, received a great deal of attention. Under the direction of Mr. Yohe, the Symphonic, Marching, Dance, and Concert Bands put on many brilliant concerts throughout the year. Probably the most enjoyable performances were the varied half time shows at football games and the fantastic accompaniment in the musicals.

Mr. Guidotti maintained the excellence of the Choral Department. The Madrigal Singers brought many more laurels to Madison this year from their brilliant performances throughout the Washington area.

The Art Department sought to bring out the tangible genius in each of its students. Field trips to the nearby Washington Art Museums helped inspire the students into working to improve the appearance of school and community. The Art I classes' depiction of the nativity scene on display in the main office at Christmas was an excellent example of fine workmanship and creativity.

In a world where nothing seems impossible mathematics provides a base of reality from which one can expand to progress. At Madison, the math curriculum has been particularly stressed, always searching for better facilities and new courses. Students were encouraged to do private research in the Math Lab, designed expressedly for that purpose.

Added to the extensive spectrum of courses which already includes Calculus and a more abstract analyses class was a computer course which allowed selected students to explore both the mathematical and scientific histories and aspects of the machine that is having such a mechanized effect on society. However, in this hustle and bustle of progress, the average student was by no means forgotten, as the Department offered such varied courses as Math 9, Algebra, Geometry, Trigonometry, and Functions.

Industrial Arts And Home Ec Mold Constructive Futures

The Home Economics Department again offered future homemakers a chance to become proficient at the skills they would certainly need in later life. They encouraged each girl to develop her skills in cooking, sewing, and in general housekeeping. Also offered was Vocational Sewing, a two-hour course in which students were trained for professional sewing careers in the making of drapes, tailoring, and other fields of professional sewing.

The Industrial Arts Department gave boys a chance to explore the many aspects of our Mechanical Age. Their wide range of courses included Electronics, General Shop, Maintenance and Repair, Mechanical Drawing, Architectural Drawing, and Engineering Drawing.

Careers In Business Stimulated

Business Teachers: Mr. Coppage, Mrs. LaSerte, Mr. Hannah, Miss Baker, Mr. Griffith, Mrs. O'Grady, Mrs. Hurley.

Offering such courses as Typing, General Business, Bookkeeping, and Shorthand, the Business Department at Madison carried out the task of educating those students who were leaning toward a career as business professionals. The job of the teachers was to teach the student the fundamentals, and then to assist him as he developed them into useful skills. Also offered were one-semester courses in Personal Typing and Notehand for the students who wished to use these skills for their own benefit.

Teachers Help Language Students Acquire Skills

French: Miss Mulcahey, Dr. Cook, Mrs. Gunter

German: Mrs. Kendall

Communication with other countries of the world has always been one of the most important facets of the United States' international relations. Therefore, it becomes very necessary to educate the people in such a way as they might more easily be able to maintain diplomatic relationship with foreign nations. The modern languages, Spanish, German, and French, were taught by the practical ALM system, whereby the student learns to speak the language as well as to write it. Latin is offered because of its obvious opportunity for word-backgrounds and cultural enrichment.

The main goal of Madison's Language Department was not only to drill the students in the fundamentals, but also to acquire various cultural aspects of the countries involved. This included another trip, during Easter, by interested Spanish students to Puerto Rico.

In a large, suburban high school, the freshman, sophomore, and junior years are the preparatory years that lead to the classification of seniors and the eventual status of the graduating class of a particular high school year. For three years, students are underclassmen at James Madison High School. As underclassmen, students spend hundreds of hours in the classroom and after school experiencing the joys and pains of learning, participating in extra-curricular activities, and getting involved in and reacting to the everyday events of school life. As Freshmen, exposure to the beginning of high school, complete with the expected new teachers, new courses, and new classmates, also reveals an involved world of new concepts in learning, more homework, and activities that require channeling of thoughts and energies in specific directions. The Greek word sophomore, standing for "wise fool" may well apply to the second year high school student. He is not a novice, yet he still is not among the really "upper" classmen. New clubs, interests, activities, and friends invite him to explore new areas, as he continues the preparatory years. As Juniors, potential leaders assume organizational vice-presidential positions, comprise Junior Varsity teams, and accept other responsibilities, while new and more advanced courses expose them to a more rigorous academic life. Through the years, the wisdom of the graduating class leads the maturing seniors to respect the underclassmen, because they, too, have experienced the three preparatory years and have earned and worked for the honor and respect accorded members who have come up through the ranks.

Class of '71

The Freshman Class became a part of Madison by enthusiastically joining in the activities, responsibilities, and privileges as students. Led by four hardworking officers, the Freshmen entered a float in the Homecoming parade, and then they successfully participated in the SPTA Drive, tying for first place with the Juniors. The Class of '71 shared the fun of bakesales, and sock hops to raise money for future class activities.

Class of '70

The Class of '70 blasted off to new heights this year, under the leadership of President John Rees. The Sophomores showed their spirit and enthusiasm in Madison activities with a unique Homecoming float and a successful after-the-game sock-hop. The class provided a victory bus for the away JV games. Bakesales, class cards and the annual Pizza Panic were among the class' money-making ventures for the 1967-68 school year.

Juniors

Mary Lou Drayer, Pres.; Cindy Cumings, V. Pres.; Jeannie Vernon, Treas.; Laurie Pickett, Sec.

Class of '69

The Junior class started off a great new year by placing runner-up in the Homecoming parade with their float, "Prom of '68 . . . A Change for the Better." The Juniors then tied for first place with the Freshmen in the SPTA drive, with 73% class participation. They had a very successful Sadie Hawkins Dance on February 29, the traditional date for turnabout. A Junior class office was set up in a room in the old library to store decorations for the prom and other junior class projects. Class dinners, new this year, were a big-hit. The pot-luck dinners with a class meeting afterwards attracted big crowds of hungry Juniors. In addition to new activities and projects, the Class of '69 carried on the traditional Breakfast Club, dances, and bake-sales.

A long sought-after goal is attained: 460 students became the Senior Class of 1968. Challenged by advanced academic studies and extra-curricular activities, the average senior was extremely busy and involved during his final year at James Madison High School. Seniors became new SCA officers and cabinet members, club presidents, editors, varsity team members, cheerleaders, and the trend setters for the school. Seriously concerned with their futures, seniors carefully prepared college applications, took college boards, and chose vocations. Long lines outside of guidance offices testified to the advice and direction sought, as they made important decisions. The closing weeks of second semester revealed to the Class of 1968 both the happiness of anticipated graduation and the sorrow of leaving old friends. For the seniors, this year was the culmination of all their individual and joint efforts toward UNITY within their class and the student body and attainment of a better education and a better school.

Seniors

Class of 1968

Graham Strong, Pres.; Pat Buckles, Treas.; Jimmy Dickson, V. Pres.; Donna Becker, Sec.

The Senior Class began their final year with confidence and spirit. Stressing cooperation and class unity and using the abundant treasury, Seniors were able to indulge in a few extravagances. Senior Power Buttons were distributed to class members to encourage class competition. The reduced cost of announcements also pleased Seniors. The class exhibited leadership in both sports and school activities. Successful Seniors brought fame to the school through their performance in the "It's Academic" competition, and recognition to themselves by winning first prize with their Homecoming float. Further evidence of class spirit was apparent through generous contributions to the Cans for Christmas Drive. In all their activities the Class of 1968 provided outstanding leadership that made this year their year of achievement.

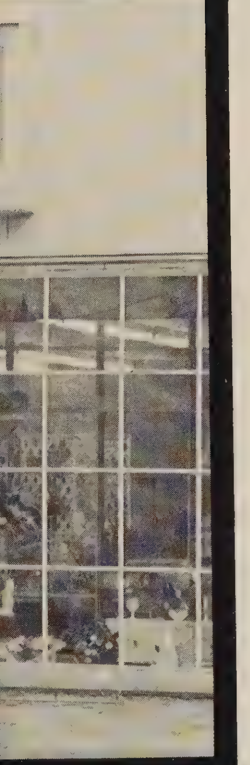
to Charlotte's.



Keen competition is the heart of the American system of economics. This competition stems from individual initiative as a student and later in life as an adult. One source of competition lies in the business life of the community. Unified effort on the part of each employee sums up the concerted effort of a business to furnish goods and services to the people. The Montpelier Staff would like to direct attention to those merchants and businessmen in Vienna who have honored the school by placing their confidence in the yearbook. Student support for products available in Vienna from these merchants will be appreciated, for the yearbook staff feels that these merchants and their reputations represent friendly, efficient service.

The Montpelier Staff wishes to express its appreciation to the student body for its support of this pictoral view of the 1967-68 school year. The Staff has tried to capture the true spirit of Madison High School through all of its aspects both in the academic and in extra-curricular affairs. To the Faculty and Administration we express gratitude for the courtesies extended when we requested groups and individuals for pictures. Without the help of Mr. Richard Vestal of Delmar Printing Company and Mr. George Deal of LaMont Studios, this edition could not have been possible, for they gave endless amounts of time and energy in assisting us with photography and advice in general. We hope that you will find our efforts acceptable and will enjoy for years to come the wonderful school year 1967-68, for you were here and helped to make it the success it was.

7 WINS – 3 LOSSES

The Warhawk Baseball team captured James Madison's first state championship in any sport and highlighted this year's spring athletics.

The Madison Nine, coached by Mr. Tom Christie, have been District Champs for two consecutive years until this first year of state-wide competition. Southpaw strikeout artist Mike Wallace, 12-0, who possessed the best record in the state, pitched the Warhawks over Highland Springs in Richmond 4-3 for the State Championship in Charlottesville on May 24, 1968.

A winning streak was shown along with the Baseball team by the Trackmen who were Great Falls District Champs with a 7-1 duel meet record. Don Chandler, who was the Most Valuable Player, and his twin brother Ron, accumulated over 2-0 combined points to lead the team according to Coach Weaver. The Golf Team followed suit by winning the Great Falls District title and the Northern Va. crown. This team was led by MVP Fred Huber and Senior Bob Chilman to a 7-1 regular season record. The tennis team, although it had a record of 3-6, showed a lot of zip and potential. Holger Dietze, who was the most valuable player, was the team captain.

Awards Assembly, Class Night Held June 3

With the Prom on June 1, the Seniors realized that their final year at Madison was quickly nearing an end. The closing days of the year were marked by frantic anticipation of Tuesday, June 4, Graduation Night at Constitution Hall.

Attending the delightful Prom given by the Class of 1969, the Seniors were transported vicariously to the Old South as the gym became the setting of a southern plantation complete with southern belles and gentlemen attendants. Planning a unique and interesting Class Night, the Seniors entered the Montpelier Room for appetizers followed by dinner, entertainment, the reading of the last will and testament, and the class prophecy. Attuned to the spirit of the day, the decor was psychedelic, complete with flower children and band.

Four hundred thirty-three seniors received their diplomas with special awards going to Mary Lee Clemons, who won the Faculty Award, and Mark Blatchford and Pat Michaelson who received the boy's and girl's citizenship awards. The Class of 1968 awarded two $350 scholarships to Steve Crossan and Dave Nahmias. The top ten academically in the class were presented certificates, and appropriate speeches were delivered by class-elected speakers, Mary Lee Clemons and Graham Strong.

Richard Barnard, voted by the Social Studies department as the best student in in United States history, receives his award from Col. Miller.

A last minute rush job on the prophecy is being polished here by Lee Eiden before he predicts the future.

Randy Latimer creates a novel sound and molds it into a tune.

The Orange, to the tune of psychedelic music and lights, added an integral part to Class Night festivities.

Pam Starkey and her date look contented as they sit this dance out.

Prom And Commencement

Sophomores Carrie Briggs and Steve Smith, in appropriate dress, serve refreshments to members and guests of the Classes of '68 and '69 at the Prom.

Prom Queen Janet Wisman is escorted to her throne by Mr. Williams.

Highlight June Activities

During intermission, friends gather outside of the gym for a breath of air and a casual visit.

Class Of 1968 Graduates At Constitution Hall

Ginny Anderson receives her diploma from Mr. Belsches, assisted by Mr. Williams.
